Here a tune, there a tune

Tuesday night, the MV music department held their annual Parade of Bands concert which they have every year in March. This is a mass band concert with the fifth grade, sixth grade, middle school, high school jazz band, and the high school bands all performing for the community. It shows how much work is put in and how dramatically a child's talent with an instrument can grow. Mr. Smith explained how everything we do in elementary adds up to what we can do and become in high school as well as the rest of our lives, and an applause and standing ovation was given to Mr. Poynor for all the work he has done over the years.

The high school jazz band played "Island Breeze," Georgia On My Mind," and "Straight No Chaser." They were followed by the entire high school band who performed "Chant and Jublio," "Three Chinese Miniatures," and "Africa."

After weeks of hard work, it was evident that they all did a good job, but that the group is also capable of a lot more and that with the solo and ensemble contests coming up, it's time to dig in deep.
